his only object was to cause public alarm,
and get his pecuniary grievance redressed;
that he did not mean to hurt the queen, but only fired at the wheels of her carriage. The only fired at the wheels of her carriage. The police evidence at the examination, which the prisoner tried to shake by cross-exami-nation, went to prove that he fired straight at the carriage, and not at the wheels, as he that Maclean fired the shot after the carriage was in motion. Princess Beatrice and John Brown saw him point the pistol at the carriage. He was exactly thirty paces distant when he fired two of the four loaded chambers. The revolver contained only blank cartridges. Maclean had walked from Portsmouth to London a week ago. Upon his person was found a purse containing a penny and three farthings, and a pocketbook containing the following entries: "Fourth Puth, a novel."
